Day 2*Saona Island Tour – Full day

Saona Island is a tropical island located a short distance from the mainland on the south-east tip of the Dominican Republic. It is a government protected nature reserve, and it is part of the Cotubanamá National Park. It is a popular destination for tourists from all over the Dominican Republic, who arrive on fleets of catamarans and small motorboats. The island is known for its beaches, and has been used on a number of occasions by film-makers and advertisers, looking for a stereotypical "desert island" setting for their film or product.

The island was baptized "Saona" by Christopher Columbus, who discovered it in May 1494 during his second voyage to the Americas.

The seas around the Island are rich in wildlife, with many species of birds and tropical marine fish, and there are large areas where natural sandbars offshore bring the depth to just a few feet. Smaller speed boats stop there, for tourists to relax in the waist-deep shallows where they snorkel, and explore the fields of starfish, indigenous to the region.

Near and around Saona Island are coral reef ecosystems, with impressive marine diversity that attract snorkelers and scuba divers alike.
